

1. Darwin's theory says that the strongest animals survive while the weaker ones die off. It's called survival of the fittest. Animals that are stronger or faster are the ones that live and have babies. Over time, the weak ones disappear and only the strong ones are left. This is how evolution happens. It's mostly about strength and fighting for survival.